- ABSTRACT PAINTINGS OF SEYMOUR BOARDMAN, trained in New York and Paris. Originally based on the figure and landscape, Boardman's work gradually became more abstract, utilizing straight lines and two or three areas of flat, muted colors. It is included in numerous museum collections, notably the Guggenheim and Whitney Museums in New York, the National Museum of American Art in Washington, DC, and the San Francisco Museum of Art in California. Also ABSTRACT PAINTINGS OF JOHN HULTBERG and others.
- RADIATOR SCULPTURE OF MICHAEL DOMINICK: "I am presenting a new kind of readymade that contradicts one of the basic conditions of the genre. The tradition of the readymade has been predicated on its removal from a utilitarian context. By going a step further I make my radiator sculptures generate heat as was their purpose. Rather than simply borrowing an object and placing it on a pedestal I additionally restore and appropriate its original function and transform that into a formal quality of the work. These sculptures deny my audience the option of non-involvement. Casual observers may choose to ignore a typical work of art, but they cannot deny the feeling of warmth against their skin. This quality surrounds the viewer and forces them to engage my work through the inescapable sensation of heat thus rupturing the typical boundaries of art perception.” (Artist demonstration 8/16/08 of molten iron drawings on paper.)

- COLLECTION OF WORLD/ETHNIC MASKS, JOE WILKENS. Gathered in travels around the world, primitive to artisan works.
